The University of Central Florida (UCF) has established several interdisciplinary clusters to strengthen its academic offerings and research mission. In support of this effort, we are recruiting five faculty members in the broad area of violence against women and with a focus on public health to complement our social science strengths in this area. We plan to hire three tenure earning assistant professors and two associate/full professors for this cluster. These positions have an anticipated start date of August 8, 2019.

These are interdisciplinary positions that will be expected to strengthen both the cluster and a chosen tenure home department, and may include a combination of joint appointments. Both individual and interdisciplinary infrastructure and startup support will be provided with these new positions.

The ideal candidates will have significant federal funding (or potential for funding if at the assistant professor level) and scholarship focused on public health aspects of violence against women. They will have research impact as reflected in high-quality publications and the potential to develop a well-funded research program. In particular, we are looking for individuals who will work at the intersection of several areas such as developmental antecedents and consequences of violence (sexual, physical, emotional, and financial); physical and mental health correlates and consequences; social welfare, advocacy, and victim services; healthcare and healthcare systems; community-based interventions and prevention; human rights; and/or public safety and criminal justice systems.

UCF is one of the nation's largest universities with a diverse student body of more than 66,000 students and has grown substantially in size, quality, diversity, and reputation in its first 50 years. Today, the university offers more than 200 degree programs at its main campus in Orlando. UCF is an economic engine, attracting and supporting industries vital to the region's future while providing students with real-world experiences that help them succeed after graduation. Adjacent to UCF is a thriving research park that conducts over $2 billion in funded research, hosting more than 100 high-technology companies and UCF's Institute for Simulation and Training. UCF also has an accredited medical school which was established in 2006. Great weather, easy access to the seashore, one of the largest convention centers in the nation, and one of the world's best airports are just a few features that make Orlando an ideal location.

A Ph.D., terminal degree, or foreign degree equivalent from an accredited institution at the time of appointment in an area appropriate to the cluster is required. The selected candidates must also have a record of high impact research related to violence against women, demonstrated by a strong scholarly and funding record. A history of working with teams, especially teams that span multiple disciplines, is a strongly preferred qualification.

Detailed information and application details may be found at <https://www.jobswithucf.com>. NOTE: Please have all application documents ready when applying so they can be attached at that time. Once the online submission process is finalized, the system does not allow applicants to submit additional documents at a later date. These positions have an anticipated start date of August 8, 2019. Review of applications will begin immediately and continue until the positions are filled.
