

Springer Criminology & Criminal Justice

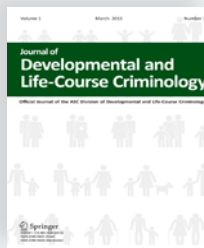

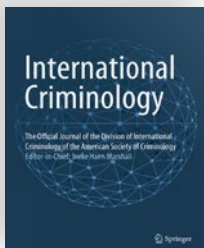

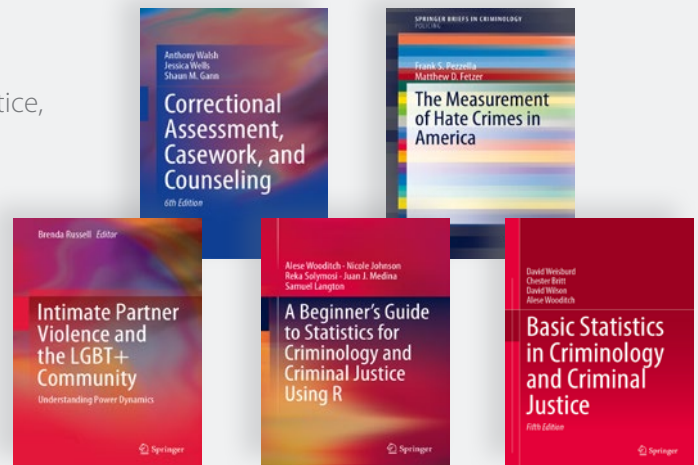

Books

Judith Newlin publishes a broad range of research and practice book titles across criminology and criminal justice, forensic psychology, and psychology and law.

We are excited about new research from both prestigious voices and emerging scholars, and welcome proposals for new monographs, SpringerBriefs, edited collections, textbooks, and reference works.

Your editorial contact: Judith Newlin

Editor, Criminology and Forensic Psychology

Journals

Springer's dynamic Criminology journals program includes a dozen titles that cover a wide spectrum of topics increasingly defining research, policy, and application in the field, including victimization, evidence-based policing, social justice, and statistical and quantitative methodologies.

Drawing from such fields as public health, psychology, sociology, and law, our portfolio promotes global and interdisciplinary perspectives of interest to researchers, students, law enforcement practitioners, and policymakers.

Featuring two of the top-15-ranked Criminology titles in the Social Sciences Citation Index, we are pleased to announce that Trends in Organized Crime and the Journal of Developmental and Life-Course Criminology have been accepted to the index.

Your editorial contact: Nicholas Philipson

Editorial Director, Business, Economics, Social Sciences, and Statistics